

New York Beaten in First of Series--Ralston Makes Good Impression

QUINN BLOWS IN SEVENTH AND NATIONALS WIN OUT

New York Yankees Put Up Stubborn Fight, but Johnson Proved Too Much for Them; Score 2 to 1.

By WILLIAM PEE.

For the first time since chunky Jack Quinn broke into the big show as a member of the New York Yankees, the Nationals reached him for a 2-0-1 victory on the Florida avenue patch yesterday afternoon, musing up his batters in the seventh and eighth for the required number of runs. Up to that time Quinn had allowed a solitary hit, and but one National saw second base.

Walter Johnson, who has not lost a game for more than a month, was hardly in the best of shape, but the Yankees found him a mighty stumbling block, and would never have scored if Walter's support had not crumbled in the opening round.

Both Johnson and Quinn allowed the same number of hits, but the locals bunched theirs in the seventh and eighth. Kid Elberfeld, a former Highlander, virtually won the game for Washington. His single paved the way for the run which tied things up, and later his hot grounder through Austin brought in the much-needed tally. The Yankees, who were also strong on the defense, blocking off two men at third when a slip would have proved costly to the Nationals.

Almsmith Delivers the Goods. McAleer gave the fans a chance to see Catcher Almsmith behind the bat with Walter Johnson pitching when Beckendorf was taken out of the game in the seventh to allow Lelivelt to bat for him. Almsmith handled Johnson's terrific speed just as easily as he has the others, and demonstrated that no alarm need be felt if anything happens to Beckendorf.

Jack Knight had a busy day as short for New York, while Birdie Cree and Daniels covered a lot of ground in the outfields.

The Yankees were lucky to score in the first inning. Daniels led off with a grounder which Kilfer slammed wildly to Unglaub. Wolter bunted, sending Daniels to the midway bag. On the hit and run signal Chase sent a slow roller which McBride nally reached, but fumbled, and before the local shortstop could recover the sphere Daniels was across the plate with an exhibition of the best base running seen here in some time.

Quinn was the same old puzzle until the seventh. For five innings nothing that even smelled of a hit came the Nationals' way. Milan led off the sixth with a single and was sacrificed to second, but the succeeding batters fled to Wolter.

In the seventh, as is the custom, everybody stood up and rooted. Washington has won more games in this lucky inning than any other club in the league. McBride was snuffed out, Austin to Chase, but Elberfeld singled to center, and Unglaub smashed the ball to deep right for a two-bagger. Lelivelt was nominated to do the pinch hitting and worked Quinn for a pass, filling the bases. This awoke the crowd, and a tremendous burst greeted Walter Johnson as he stepped up to the bat. Quinn must have suffered from a case of rattles, for he could not locate the plate, and Johnson drew a ticket, forcing in Elberfeld. Milan struck out, and Kilfer forced Johnson at second.

Conroy Leads Off with Hit. With the score a tie, Conroy broke open the eighth with a vicious drive, which Austin knocked down, but could not hold. Gessler sacrificed. McBride went out, Knight to Chase, but on the Conroy sneaked down to third. Kid Elberfeld won the game, when his grounder got away from Austin. The latter was lucky to touch the ball, as the Kid met it squarely, and it sailed along the grass with the velocity of a rifle bullet.

The only time the Yankees threatened to become dangerous was in the eighth, when, after Daniels had been disposed of, Wolter and Chase singled. Knight's grounder to McBride forced Wolter, and Gardner's hot one to Elberfeld retired Knight.

A double play in the Yankees' ninth, with a man on first, killed any further chance the visitors had to score.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

On an attempted double steal, or a near-sneak play, Beckendorf put it on Hal Chase in the first on his attempted steal to home.

"Red" Kilfer's erratic slams in the first and second sessions brought forth groans from the crowd.

One for a starter from the Yanks.

Jack Lelivelt batted for Beckendorf in the seventh and Quinn magnanimously passed him.

This filled the bases, and a moment later Walter Johnson got a free ticket, thus scoring Elberfeld, and, incidentally, tying the score.

Kilfer made a great try for Chase's fly to right field in the eighth, and missed the ball by an inch.

A spectacular stop by McBride of Knight's swift rap and a lightning throw to Kilfer retired Chase a moment later.

Wild Conroy's hard smash in the eighth was too torrid for Third-sacker Austin and Conroy made first easily.

On sacrifice hits by Gessler and McBride and a smash by Elberfeld Conroy scored.

Daniels, first up in the opening inning, slapped a grounder down Kilfer's way, which Red threw wildly to first, the ball hitting Umpire Colliflower on the leg.

The locals went out via the fly route in the first inning.

One of Quinn's fast ones plunked Gessler on the cranium in the second, knocking off his cap. Incidentally the Doctor was the only National who reached first until the seventh inning.

Chase soaked a grounder to Elberfeld in the third and the Kid promptly tagged Daniels coming in to the bag from second.

Daniels drew a pass with two down in the fifth, and Chase singled through short field, but Gessler took care of Knight's fly, ending the inning.

Johnson fanned Gardner on three successive balls in the sixth.

Milan led off the sixth with the first hit for the Nationals, but neither Conroy nor Gessler could bring him across the plate.

After Elberfeld had singled through Knight in the seventh, old reliable Bob Kilfer planted a wicked one into right that put the Kid on third and himself on second. This paved the way for the undoing of Quinn.

McBride made a spectacular stop and throw in the eighth on Wolter's drive with two on the bags, and threw to Kilfer, who made a pretty pick-up of the ball, getting Chase at second.

Kid Elberfeld saved the day in the eighth by grabbing Cree's grounder with third occupied and touching Knight coming in to third.

Wid Conroy drove a ball like a shot to Knight in the eighth which was too hot for the third sacker to handle cleanly.

Ainsmith took Beckendorf's place behind the bat in the eighth and demonstrated his ability to hold Johnson, much to the delight of Jimmy McAleer and the fans.

Ralston, the new outfielder, was in a Washington uniform yesterday, and from all appearances he looks like a good one. He may be in the line-up to-day.

It took Kid Elberfeld to sew up the game for the Nationals in the eighth, when he smashed a liner past third.

Hemphill batted for Austin in the ninth, but the best Charlie could do was to lift a little fly back of third which McBride clung to.

With Cree on first in the ninth and one out, Sweeney popped to Kilfer, and before the Highlander wind powder could scamper back to first, Kilfer's throw had the ball resting in Unglaub's paws and the game was over.

Football Outlook at Central Is Bright, as All of Last Year's Veterans Will Return.

Three of the local high schools--Business, Technical, and Central--will have their initial football practice Monday.

Football candidates are requested to be on hand at Central High School Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and report for practice to L. M. Leonard. The outlook for the coming season is bright, and followers of the school are looking for a championship aggregation at the O street school.

Technical will miss the services of half of last year's veterans, but Coach Hloco says that he will have an eleven that will surprise the wise ones.

Business has the nucleus of only the best teams in the history of the school, and it remains for the players to keep in good standing for the Orange and Blue to capture the high school championship.

FOOTBALL TEAM ORGANIZES.

All Teams Averaging 140 Pounds Are Challenged by Yarmouth.

The Yarmouth football team, which made such a good showing last season and won the 140-pound championship of the District, has organized for the season and would like to hear from all the fast fellows in the District.

At the initial practice yesterday all of last year's veterans reported for duty and many crack players have signified their intentions of trying for positions on the team. For games address J. C. Stewart, 127 Third street northeast.
